

Cleantech Energy

Cleantech companies working toward sustainable energy solutions through the use of green technologies face a wide range of legal, technical and regulatory issues. Gowlings' Cleantech Group brings in-depth knowledge of the energy sector and the environmental industry to clients across Canada, providing them with the expert counsel needed to compete at a high-level in today's marketplace.

Gowlings has extensive experience working for clients in the transmission, distribution, marketing and retailing of electricity, the generation of power from biomass, solar, hydrogen, wind and water, the development of alternative energy technologies and related services, and the financing of renewable energy businesses. Gowlings has advised clients regarding the development of some of Canada's most significant electricity generating facilities. Our energy lawyers have represented clients before both federal and provincial regulatory agencies, involving everything from distribution rate cases to the licensing of power generators. And our team of patent agents have extensive experience in obtaining patent protection for renewable energy technologies.

Whether you are considering entering the market, or are already established with consumers and investors, Gowlings brings the expertise to grow your business in Canada, North America and around the world. Our multidisciplinary team of legal experts can also assist cleantech companies in raising capital, protecting intellectual property, tax structuring, accessing government technology support programs, developing commercialization strategies and navigating federal and provincial legislation and regulations.
